

Peonies for a Bungalow Garden

Peonies to help create an historically accurate landscape

Peonies were, and still are, traditional flowers appropriate for early 20th century bungalows. If your goal is to bring back authentic plants, consider peonies. Many of the long-lived peonies grown since the early 1900s are still available with a little searching. This handout offers a look at a dozen of the peonies grown in the bungalow's heyday.

Edulis Superba, 1824

Mons Jules Elie, 1888

Sarah Bernhardt, 1906

Chestine Gowdy, 1913

President Roosevelt, 1905

Festiva Maxima, 1851

Produced as part of the Spring 2018 issue of the Twin Cities Bungalow Club's newsletter, the Small Home Gazette. For detailed descriptions of each of these peonies, visit the Twin Cities Bungalow Club's website at bungalowclub.org. Click on "Newsletter"; then on "web only articles."

TWIN CITIES BUNGALOW CLUB

Peonies for a Bungalow Garden, continued

Lady Alexandra Duff, 1902

Felix Crousse, 1881

Karl Rosenfield, 1908

Mary Brand, 1907

Mikado, 1893

Tokio, 1910

Produced as part of the Spring 2018 issue of the Twin Cities Bungalow Club's newsletter, the Small Home Gazette. For detailed descriptions of each of these peonies, visit the Twin Cities Bungalow Club's website at bungalowclub.org. Click on "Newsletter"; then on "web only articles."

Photos courtesy of Hidden Springs Flower Farm (hiddenspringsflowerfarm.com), Spring Grove, MN, except for the photo of peony President Roosevelt.